Video Oral History Interview with Reverend Theophilus Caviness, Section A2004_080_001_001, TRT: 0:30:19 ?

Reverend Theophilus Caviness was born on May 23, 1928 in Marshall, Texas. His mother, Lula Page Caviness, was born in Redwater, Texas and stressed education for her children. His father, Will Stone Caviness, was born near Marshall and worked three jobs to support his six sons. Caviness was raised in Marshall, an agricultural community with three colleges. He attended Hillside and Dunbar Elementary Schools and was baptized at Galilee Baptist Church where he preached his first sermon in 1946, shortly after graduating from Pemberton High School. He had an interest in the ministry since an early age and began to seriously pursue the profession at Bishop College in Marshall where he also met his future wife and was mentored by the dean of the college. Caviness pastored a church in Texarkana, Arkansas before pursuing his bachelor's of divinity at Eden Theological Seminary in St. Louis, Missouri and pastoring at Mount Nebo Missionary Baptist Church in Madison, Illinois where he voted for the first time in 1955

Reverend Theophilus Caviness attended Galilee Baptist Church as a child in Marshall, Texas and attended Bishop College, which has produced many Baptist church leaders. In 1961, Caviness left St. Paul Baptist Church in East St. Louis, Illinois to pastor Greater Abyssinia Baptist Church in the Glenville neighborhood of Cleveland, Ohio. In 1967, during Carl B. Stokes's mayoral election, Reverend Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. spoke at Caviness's church after a nearby church became overcrowded. Following Stokes' election, Caviness was appointed head of the zoning board and later, held various positions in Cleveland's local government and served on the Ohio Civil Rights Commission. He was also the historian of the National Baptist Convention, U.S.A., Inc. and president of the Ohio Baptist General Convention. Caviness talks about the Baptist churches' autonomous structure, its convening organizations and its leaders, the decline of Cleveland and East St. Louis since the 1950s and '60s and Adam Clayton Powell, Jr.

Reverend Theophilus Caviness admired the Reverend Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.'s work and philosophy and Adam Clayton Powell, Jr.'s nonpartisan approach to politics. When riots broke out following the Glenville Shootout in Cleveland, Ohio, Caviness and Mayor Carl B. Stokes decided not to call in the police but rather let citizens patrol the neighborhood. The riots resulted in a loss of business in the area. Caviness was executive assistant to Cleveland mayor George Voinovich and served as liaison between him and HistoryMaker The Honorable George Forbes, who was president of the city council. He once paid Forbes's water bill to settle a dispute between the two politicians. During Cleveland Mayor Michael R. White's tenure, Caviness served on the Northeast Ohio Sewer Board of Trustees and the Ohio Civil Rights Commission from 1991 to 2000. Caviness became infamous for his flamboyant style and was sought out for endorsements by politicians running for HistoryMaker The Honorable Louis Stokes's Congressional seat.

Reverend Theophilus Caviness first became involved in the Southern Christian Leadership Conference in the 1950s when he sought its support desegregating the Walgreens in downtown East St. Louis. The Easter Sunday boycott was ultimately successful and Coretta Scott King sang at the event. Caviness was persuaded by HistoryMaker Reverend Raleigh Trammell to revitalize the Cleveland Branch of the SCLC and recalls the leadership of Carole Hoover and other women in the SCLC. Caviness presided over the Baptist Ministers Council of Cleveland and Vicinity for twenty-five years. In 1998, he supported Stephanie Tubbs Jones's campaign for the U.S. House of Representatives. He details his family members' contributions to Greater Abyssinia Baptist Church, including a scholarship created in his wife's memory. Caviness talks about the importance of human rights in the 21st century and his position on gay marriage. He explains the Baptist churches' philosophy towards Biblical interpretation and his philosophy of service.

Reverend Theophilus Caviness organized a Children's Choir as part of his efforts to revitalize the Cleveland Chapter of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. The SCLC Children's Choir offers children the opportunity to travel and meet important figures in the Civil Rights Movement. Caviness has raised funds from local businesses to sponsor both the Children's Choir and various scholarships given to students by the Greater Abyssinia Baptist Church of Cleveland, Ohio. At the time of the interview, Caviness was still pastoring his church. Caviness reflects upon his legacy and narrates his photographs.
